Ronnie Brown

Miami Dolphins Running Back, Selected 2nd Overall in 2005 Draft

Considered by many to be the best all-around prospect at running back heading into the 2005 NFL draft, Ronnie Brown is looking to build a successful pro career after starring for four years at Auburn University. Brown rushed for 913 yards in 2004 and made a name for himself in the collegiate ranks as a strong, workmanlike player. A punishing runner, Brown averaged a stunning 6.0 yards per carry while helping the Tigers to a 13-0 season. With the help of the trainers at Athletes' Performance in Arizona, Brown's stock rose in the 2005 NFL Draft after he dropped his time in the 40-yard dash to 4.44 and his body fat to 6.
